OVATION FOR TARDIEU

Poincare Sends Greetings and Greatest Enthusiasm Is Manifested.

The dryads, scraphim and cherubim nymphs and faires in their ecant mural draperies have looked down from the celling of the grand ballroom of the Walderf-Asteria on many great banquets, but they never saw greater enthusiasm than that which fountained from the dinner that the General Association the Alsatians and Lorrainers of perica tendered last night in honor of the Chasseurs Alpine (Blue Devils of France). Incidentally there was paid the finest tribute yet offered M. Andre Tardleu, High Commissioner of the rench Republic and valiant Captain of be Blue Devils.

the Blue Devils.

When you think of the wonderful Lucien Muratore, tenor of the Chicago Opera Company, singing the "Marche Lerraine" and the "Marseillaise," Mme. de Cisneros of the Metropolitan Opera Company singing "The Star Spangled Banner" so gloriously that the Chaseura showered her with red roses and waved a hundred kisses, and Nahan Franko swinging his orchestra into the the same roa french National Defile March and crowds that is "Father Victory" and the other tunes of buildings. Yesterday Blue Devils jumping up on chairs every few minutes to vive this and that, with everybody standing up at intervals of band, and a gallery of the most beau-teous daughters of France that have ever been gathered together in this country, and a constant round of ap-plause that rattled like a machine gun, you may have some idea of the brand of rand fra characteristically Franch rank fire characteristically French nthusiasm, that effervesced last night or the heroes of France and the Pershing veterans.

"Alsace-Lorraine stands out as the very symbol of our cause. The issue is whether a military caste well be able in the future to enforce the law of hight on free peoples asserting their will not submit to that law. The issue is whether German militarism will in the future be able to keep on handling the people like cattle. The issue is whether liberty, for which we live, for which we die, will in the future mean an empty

Replying to the German leaders' claims that there is no question as to Alsace-Lorraine and that the bond beween these provinces and Germany growing closer, M.
